

Burn Hotel To Make Movie Real

While styles in farce may change from time to time, the extravagance of premise and acceleration of tempo which make the lightest form of articulate comedy the most laughable remain to all intents and purposes, constant.

Take the case of "Please Get Married" as typical. This piece on the stage set the fashion in "peek-a-boudoir" comedy, still prevalent, due as much to the clever impersonations of perplexed young people by Edith Tallaferro and Ernest Truex as to the unusual degree of originality displayed by Messrs. James Cullen and Lewis Allan Browne, the authors. A bride and groom, adventuring on their supposed honeymoon, naturally would be slightly annoyed at the suggestion that they had not been legally married. Their efforts to thwart pursuing parents and irate hotel detectives might be made in all desperation, and it might even be necessary to burn down a fashionable summer resort hotel in order sufficiently to harass them. Precisely.

Just those things were done to make the road traveled by Viola Dana and Antrim Short, the successors of Miss Tallaferro and Mr. Truex in the film version of the famous laughing success to be seen for the first time in Washington at Crandall's Metropolitan and Knickerbocker theaters today.

Singer Reveals Another Star Performer

Jack Singer, who brings his famous "Behman Show" to the Gayety this week, has the distinction of giving to the burlesque world more stars than any other producer on the Columbia wheel. Singer has the knack of "picking them," and his latest discovery, Harry Lander, gives promise of a brilliant future.

Here are some of the players to whom Singer has shown the way to stardom, both in the "legitimate" and burlesque: Morton and Moore, Mollie Williams, Marion Moore, Len Hascall, Will Kennedy, Lew Fields, the Watson Sisters, the Courtney Sisters, Ben Welch, Lucille Manion, George Armstrong, Amata Paynes and numerous others.

Harry Lander, the new acquisition, came direct from the Keith vaudeville circuit to "The Behman Show," and it was while playing at the Keith house here that his present manager first witnessed the comedian's work.

The secret of always keeping a part fresh in the minds of the public, says Lenore Ulric, whom David Belasco will present in "The Son-Daughter," at the Shubert-Belasco Theater, next week, is to make it at every performance a story newly told.

Pauline Frederick shocked the entire Goldwyn studios by declaring that she had shorn her shapely head of its wealth of glorious brown tresses. Then when she had enjoyed the gasps of everyone, she confessed it was a wig for her new Goldwyn picture by Edgar Saltus. But what a wig! This is an informal picture of the Goldwyn star entering her dressing room at the West Coast studios.

GOLDWYN PICTURES TO AID AMERICAN LEGION WORK

Coincident with the national convention of the American Legion in Minneapolis on November 10, 11 and 12, the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, through its president, Samuel Goldwyn, has offered the co-operation of the organization to each post of the legion throughout the country.

Realizing that a better Americanism depends upon the legion, the Goldwyn Corporation is now discussing with them ways and means of using the motion picture to spread the Americanization ideas and ideals of the American Legion.

Oliver Morosco will present four plays by Anne Nichols this season. They are "His Lady Friend," written for Charlotte Greenwood; "Married in Triplicate," "Seven Miles to Arden" and "His Lucky Number." Flske O'Hara, the Irish troubadour, will be heard in "Down Limerick Way," another of Miss Nichols' efforts.
